1. RECAP and SOMETHING NEW

Each fortnight we'll be giving you something to do that's a little bit new, and encouraging you to complete it during the fortnight. Next fortnight, we'll check in and see how it went, run through it again, and give you the next step. Last week we ran through how to listen to the radio over the internet (streaming), and we tasked you with downloading one of the apps we mentioned. How did you go?

VRadio: Recording, Category Search, Alarm, Sleep, Equaliser, Settings (lots of)

TuneIn: Car Mode, buffer wind back, Alarm, Sleep, Sports, News, Podcasts

Online Radio Box: Playlist, Sleep, Alarm

Community Radio Plus: Podcasts, Trending, Sleep

Whats next?

Android

Try to CAST to Google, TV and other devices.

Let's ask Google to play something from an installed App

Play HFM

Example: Play the channel nine news

Example: Play the channel ten news

Let's try Siri

Siri will ask which app to use. You may need to install TuneIn (for example)

We can also ask for certain things and specify an App

Example: Play Anthony Warlow on Youtube

Example: Play Justin Timberlake on Spotify

Example: Play the ABC News - will open the Podacast App

Music Interlude: 02   Take A Letter Maria - R B Greaves (1969)

"According to the World Health Organisation, over half the world's population doesn't have access to essential health services. Here in our own backyard, the population in rural and remote areas have a shorter life expectancy than those in metro areas, likely due to poor access to health services.

Transporting time-sensitive samples and medications is a huge challenge for healthcare providers and when you need to pick something up really quickly, it can be difficult to mobilise vehicles and travel hundreds of kilometres, especially if the roads are poor.

Enter Swoop Aero and their medical drone logistics company. Eric Peck (Air force pilot) and co-founder Josh Tepper (a robotics engineer) were challenged with the idea of delivering chemotherapy medication to rural Australia. They started up in 2017 and were awarded the world's first competitive tender for medical drone delivery by UNICEF and the Vanuatu Government to supply aid to the remote islands in Vanuatu.

Today, Swoop Aero drones can deliver up to three kilograms of medical supplies – including cold chain vaccines, medicine, samples and other equipment. Customers can opt in and schedule deliveries through their medical services provider. They are told when and where the drone will land with their supplies via a telehealth consultation or a messaging service like WhatsApp.

It gets better… with real-time monitoring, backup systems, 3D printing of drone bodies and green powered manufacturing, the drone fleet is flying towards net zero. They even make rechargeable torches from the degraded drone batteries which are distributed in remote areas and overseas.

Of course, transportation is a huge contributor to carbon emissions which Swoop is helping to reduce."

Notes:

Having a look overseas… In Scotland, schools in remote parts of Argyll and Bute are trialling using drones for meal delivery with a company called Skyports. These remote schools currently rely on a combination of traditional transport including vans, taxis and ferries all of which can be severely hampered by weather conditions.

But wait there's more… Soon there may be McDrones, Uber Drones… The idea is to deliver to landing pads or on top of parked Uber cars, for couriers and Ubers to do the last mile.

Of course there is all sorts of legal stuff to deal with.

Millennials might get work as drone pilots with all their gaming experience.

If you want to play with drones, Mid to high level consumer drones can travel anywhere from 3 to 8km and can be quite fun.

The more advanced drones make use of FPV (first person view) mode, where you can see through the drone camera by using goggles.
