2. FROM THE NEWS AND SPECIAL INTEREST

WhatsApp may be the latest cyber victim

The Facebook-owned company Whatsapp was out of action for a few hours on Wednesday this week as a result of a possible cyber attack. Incidentally Whatapp has approx 2 billion users worldwide. So far everyone is keeping tight lipped about this and will neither confirm or deny an attack at this stage.

Music News:

Woolies self serve - scanning fruit and veg

Woolworths has added a new feature to its checkout scanners to detect the type of fruit or vegetable being weighed.

It's a hidden feature built into the scanner and it's only when you weigh a food you will notice the difference — that you're no longer required to manually search for an item.

The hi-tech solution recognises the fruit or vegetable based on its colour, shape or size and will automatically appear on the screen.

So if a customer places a loose tomato on the scanner, the system will show a range of tomato varieties rather than the full list of fruit and vegetable items.

This revised system also makes it impossible for dishonest people to enter a cheaper product when weighing produce, while using the self-service checkout system.

3. DEEP DIVE Notifications

You can control what notifications you see and when.

Android

Settings -> Notifications

- App Settings -> turn on individual apps, drill into the app for specifics
- Notifications on lock screen
- Sensitive Notifications
- DND - based on people, apps, schedules
- Snoozing
- Turn on Notification History to catch those you miss

Long press a notification to change the specific settings - silent, cog, turn off.

Suggest you make them silent then revisit

Have a think about how this could change your overall experiences!

5. APP OF THE DAY Authenticator Apps

These apps are tied to your device so you need to back them up if you transfer to another device.

Google Authenticator

Google's authenticator app is basic and offers no extra frills. Unlike Microsoft Authenticator, Google Authenticator doesn't add any special options for its own services. Google Authenticator lacks online backup for your account codes, but you can import them from an old phone to a new one if you have the former on hand.

Microsoft Authenticator

Microsoft Authenticator includes secure password generation and lets you log in to Microsoft accounts with a button press. Account recovery is available should you transfer to a new phone and you'll see an option to recover by signing into your Microsoft account and providing more verifications. Microsoft Authenticator offers another layer of security: You can require unlocking your phone with PIN or biometric verification in order to see the codes.

There are others including LastPass, 2FAS
