3	12:23	NEWS 1 - Phone scams up and down
----------	--------------	---

Have you recently noticed an increase in scam sms messages?

The Australian Communications and Media Authority (ACMA) has recently taken action against three telcos in response to compliance failures that allowed scammers to send SMS road toll, Medicare, and Australia Post impersonation scams to unsuspecting consumers. The three telcos in question are Sinch Australia Pty Ltd, Infobip Information Technology Pty Ltd, and Phone Card Selector Pty Ltd.

According to ACMA, its investigations found that these telcos allowed SMS to be sent using text-based sender IDs without sufficient checks to ensure they were being used legitimately. As a result, scammers were able to exploit this loophole and send fraudulent messages to individuals, posing as legitimate organisations such as Australia Post and Medicare.

Infobip was found to be the biggest offender, allowing a staggering 103,146 non-compliant SMS to be sent. Sinch allowed 14,291.

The ACMA has taken swift action against these telcos, imposing hefty fines and requiring them to take steps to prevent such compliance failures from occurring again in the future. This is a significant step in the fight against SMS scams and serves as a warning to other telcos to tighten their compliance measures.

The 2023/24 budget was released last week with a sizable chunk devoted to technological initiatives. Diving into some of these areas, there's:

$116m (over 5 years) for the Department of Industry, Science, and Resources to "support the development of critical technologies in Australia to drive economic growth, boost technology industries, and support the creation of new jobs". This includes $101m to help businesses broadly support quantum computing and AI.

$14m over 4 years to setup the Powering Australia Industry Growth Centre as part of the "Australian Made Battery Plan"

$132m over 4 years to STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) scheme with $91 million being used at schools over the next few years to build better IT platforms.

$134m (over four years) for the Office of the eSafety Commissioner to continue doing its thing.

$392m (over four years) to help small businesses and startups commercialise their ideas and grow their operations.

$86m (over four years) to combat scams and online fraud.

$26m for work in the DigitalID space

$134m for our old favourite MyGov.

Get used to the name folks, Linda Yaccarino, NBC Universal's head of advertising, is in talks to take up the role of CEO for Twitter as Elon Musk announces he is stepping down. The billionaire entrepreneur, known for his ambitious ventures in space travel, electric vehicles, and renewable energy, made headlines in October 2022 when he purchased the social media platform for a whopping $US44 billion. However, Musk's tenure as CEO has been marked by controversy and erratic behaviour, and his decision to step down has been met with both relief and skepticism. The news of Musk's departure comes amid mounting concerns about his leadership style and the impact it has had on the company. Musk has been criticised for his penchant for Twitter feuds, his disregard for traditional corporate governance, and his tendency to make bold and often outlandish statements that have the potential to harm Twitter's reputation.

If Linda is indeed successful, she is expected to take over in around six weeks' time.

Smart Watches are a waste of money.

<https://www.refurb.me/blog/are-smartwatches-worth-it>

Smartwatches have become an integral part of everyday life for many people in recent years. They are no longer just a fancy accessory or a novelty item, but rather a practical and useful device that can help us stay connected and organised. With features like fitness tracking, notifications, and even voice assistants, smartwatches have transformed the way we interact with technology and each other.

Touch IoT - enabled by wireless self-sensing and haptic-reproducing electronic skin

Tactile sensing
Haptic feedback
Wireless

Tactile sensations are essential to our daily interactions with the world. From the warm embrace of a loved one to the firm grip of a handshake, touch is a fundamental aspect of human connection. However, in a world increasingly reliant on technology, physical touch is becoming less common. That's where wireless touch perception comes in.

Researchers have developed a wireless self-sensing and haptic-reproducing electronic skin (e-skin) that could revolutionise the way we interact with the world. This flexible and self-sensing actuator provides an integrated function in both tactile sensing and haptic feedback. When this e-skin is dynamically pressed, the actuator generates an induced voltage as tactile information. Via wireless communication, another e-skin can receive this tactile data and run a synchronised haptic reproduction. Thus, touch can be wirelessly conveyed in both directions between two users as a touch intercom.

What's truly remarkable about this technology is that it can be connected to various smart devices, creating a touch internet of things. With this, one-to-one and one-to-multiple touch delivery can be realised. This wireless touch presents huge potentials in remote touch video, medical care, and assistance.

Imagine a world where a doctor can diagnose a patient remotely by feeling their symptoms through a wireless e-skin. Or where a loved one can hold the hand of a family member who is miles away. This technology could bring us one step closer to a world where physical touch is not limited by distance.

The possibilities of wireless touch perception are endless and could drastically change the way we communicate and interact with each other. While physical touch will always be irreplaceable, this technology could bring us one step closer to bridging the gap between physical and digital communication.

Can I replace my phone battery?

Very few phones available today have consumer removable batteries and those that do are not very good phones. A quick search reveals the Samsung Galaxy XCover 6 Pro $900, Fairphone4, Nokia C21.

Bottom line - battery should last up to 4 years with normal use and realistically, you'll want a new phone after that time.

Consider a battery pack as a stop-gap until you're ready for a new phone.
