----------	--------------	-----------------

Recently it seems AI news is everywhere and you would be right!

Scientists will always be looking for ways to improve artificial intelligence (AI) systems, and one of the latest developments in this field involves training an AI-powered chatbot on the dark web.

The dark web, as you may know, is a part of the internet that is not easily accessible through traditional search engines. It's a place where people can buy and sell illegal goods, such as drugs, weapons, and stolen data. But it's also home to a wealth of information that can be used for scientific research.

Well, South Korean scientists have now turned to the dark web to train their chatbot on more sophisticated language patterns and trends not readily available on the surface of the internet. The team, led by Dr. Lee Kyung-Joo of the Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (KAIST), has been using the GPT (Generative Pre-trained Transformer) model to train their chatbot.

The researchers believe that training ChatGPT on data from the dark web will help improve its ability to understand and generate text related to sensitive topics, such as drugs, crime, and other illegal activities. This could be useful in fields such as law enforcement, cybersecurity, and even healthcare.

The project has already yielded some interesting results... Obviously, ChatGPT was able to generate more accurate and detailed responses to questions related to drugs and crime when it was trained on dark web data, suggesting that the model is able to learn from the unique language and terminology used in these communities.

Of course, there are ethical concerns surrounding the use of data from the dark web. Researchers, acknowledging that they are working with sensitive information, are taking steps to ensure that their work is conducted in a responsible and ethical manner.

What could possibly go wrong?

STINGERNEWS 2 - Trust AI with your financial decisions

As AI expands into various industries and fields, one area that's seeing significant growth is personal finance, and Ms. Coles, a leading expert in the financial industry is at the forefront of this growth. She believes that AI has tremendous potential to revolutionise the way we manage our finances. With AI-powered tools and services, individuals and businesses can streamline their financial management processes, make more informed decisions, and gain greater control over their financial futures.

One key area where AI is making an impact is in the realm of financial planning and investment management. AI algorithms can analyse vast amounts of data, including market trends, economic indicators, and individual financial goals, to provide personalised investment advice and recommendations. This can help individuals make more informed investment decisions and potentially increase their returns.

AI is also expanding in fraud detection and prevention. With the rise of online banking and digital transactions, fraudsters are finding new ways to steal personal and financial information. AI-powered tools can analyse transaction data in real-time to identify suspicious activity and alert account holders to potential fraud.

Ms. Coles also sees AI as a valuable tool for improving financial literacy.

Many people struggle to understand complex financial concepts and terminology, which can make it difficult to make informed decisions about their money. AI-powered educational tools can break down these concepts into simpler terms and provide personalised recommendations based on an individual's financial situation.

Tread carefully!

STINGERNEWS 3 - Fast Food tunnel delivery

This possibly should have featured in the Tech Absurd, but it's happening now, so...

Wendy's, the popular fast-food chain, is taking the concept of convenience to a whole new level with its latest innovation.

Recently, they started using AI chatbots at drive-thrus which seems to be successful thus far...

...but now, Wendy's has teamed up with Pipedream, an autonomous logistics company, to create an underground delivery system for online order pickups. The system is currently being piloted, and if successful, it could revolutionise the way we pick up food orders.

The system works by using robots to transport online food orders from Wendy's kitchens through tunnels to "Instant Pickup portals" located beside parking spaces. When a customer arrives at their designated space, they talk to the restaurant crew through the Instant Pickup portal's speaker to confirm their order. An autonomous robot then travels through the tunnels to deliver the food directly to the customer's parking space.

One of the most significant advantages of this delivery system is that it eliminates the need for customers to go inside the restaurant or wait at a drive-thru to pick up their order. Instead, the food is brought directly to them, saving them time and hassle. Moreover, the use of temperature-controlled delivery technology ensures that the food is delivered at the right temperature, preventing it from getting cold or too warm while in transit.

Crazy but cool, maybe...

4	12:31	Something for Nothing - WhatsApp
----------	--------------	---

- Another way to make calls from your existing mobile phone number basically for free.
- Message privately.
- Simple, reliable, private messaging and calling for free*, available all over the world.
- With end-to-end encryption, your personal messages and calls are secured. Only you and the person you're talking to can read or listen to them, and nobody in between, not even WhatsApp.
- Groups are great to keep everyone in the loop with photos, videos, chats and video calls.
(Magooit.com.au for a demo)

Text, Audio, Video

Uses the internet (data) not paid via a phone call.

Great for international calls. Be mindful of your phone's data plan and/or your home data plan if you are using home wifi.

You can use free wifi hotspots and WhatsApp handles the encryption over the call.

Available as an app on Apple and Google devices and Windows devices.

There is also Whatsapp Web which you can use on shared computers without installing the app.

Free (only data usage). Compare that to a roaming data plan with your telco - can be super expensive.

1939: NBC carries the first broadcast-televised sporting event in history, the second game of a doubleheader baseball game between Columbia and Princeton. Only about 400 TV sets were capable of receiving the transmission, but it was an important first step in the history of televised sports.

1960: Physicist Theodore Maiman created the first operating laser light, using a synthetic-ruby crystal device.

1946: Jack Mullin, an electrical engineer and US Army Signal Corps veteran in World War II, gives the first demonstration of a high-fidelity tape recording in the United States at an Institute of Radio Engineers meeting in San Francisco. He was able to demonstrate that a recorded jazz band sounded virtually identical to a live one during this demo

1980: Digital Equipment Corporation, Intel, and Xerox jointly announce the Ethernet network specification - The predominant networking standard of today's business and home networks.

7	13:08	FUTURE TECH from the Innovation Hub - 3D printed replacement bones

The field of 3D printing has been one of the most promising industries in recent years, offering a wide range of applications from cheap house building to affordable rugged armour. However, one of the most interesting and life-changing uses of this technology is the ability to build 3D printed bones.

One company that has taken on this challenge head-on is Ossiform. This company specialises in medical 3D printing and creates patient-specific replacements of different bones from tricalcium phosphate – a material with similar properties to human bones.

The process of using these 3D printed bones is surprisingly straightforward. A hospital can perform an MRI, which is then sent to Ossiform. From this, the team can create a 3D model of the patient-specific implant that is needed. The surgeon then accepts the design, and once it is printed, it can be used in surgery.

The beauty of tricalcium phosphate is that it allows the body to remodel the implants into vascularised bone. This means that the implants enable the full restoration of function that the bone it is replacing had. The implants are of a porous structure and feature large pores and canals for cells to attach to and reform bone.

Are you tired of hitting snooze on your alarm clock every morning? Do you need a little extra help getting out of bed and starting your day? Look no further than the Clocky rolling alarm clock

Picture this: you're snuggled up in bed, sound asleep, when suddenly your alarm goes off. You groggily reach over to turn it off, only to realise it's not on your nightstand where you left it. Instead, it's rolling around on the floor, blaring its wake-up tune and forcing you to get out of bed and chase after it.

That's the beauty of Clocky. This innovative alarm clock is designed to help you wake up and start your day, whether you like it or not. With its unique rolling feature, Clocky is guaranteed to get you out of bed and moving around each morning.

Yeah, nah, no thanks!

Theme	Game Music - Candy Crush Themes

Candy Crush Saga is a free-to-play tile-matching video game released by King on April 12, 2012, originally for Facebook; then other versions for Apple, Android & Windows. It is a variation of their browser game Candy Crush which you can play at poki.com google “poki.com candy crush”.

	You are greeted with a colourful pallet of candies with the objective of lining them up in lines of 3 or more of the same kind, with a gentle swipe of adjacent candies to move them around. They then disappear and are placed with more. This could automatically match other combinations making you stare in awe as the screen flashes and beeps until no more matches are found. There are bonuses if you match 4 or more including clearing entire rows and creating special GOD candies with special properties. Each level adds to the challenges and the game guarantees to keep you engaged for as long as your finger can hack it.
