2	12:10	TIPS &amp; TRICKS - SOMETHING NEW
This Time	Take a Photo and send it to a friend or loved one

Android

- Open your camera and take a photo.
- If you've just done that, tap on the photo's thumbnail in the camera app to open the photo. If you're wanting to share a previously captured photo, open the photo app to find it and open it up.
- Across the bottom you will see some icons Share - Edit - Delete and maybe others
- Tap on share (symbol) and select the sharing method you would like to use. Android will default to Google Photos but you can look further down for apps including Messages, Messenger (Chats), WhatsApp (if you have it), More for other things like email, print, etc...

Apple

- Similarly selecting the photo to share, you tap the share icon (square with arrow).
- At the top you can choose to send location or not.
- Scroll through apps to select the desired option then go.

3	12:23	NEWS 1 - WWDC
----------	--------------	----------------------

Apples Word Wide Developers Conference for 2023 landed on Wednesday this week and there was lots to talk about as usual. CEO Tim Cook opened with his usual Keynote presentation and not surprisingly hardly mentioned the term AI for the duration... instead he focussed on the familiar phrase machine learning, which after all is what AI is right?

Apple devices are well known as the most secure devices in the world, with your data privacy being of utmost importance, so talk of AI and all that jazz is not something Apple are going to buy into - at least not as openly and as blatantly as Microsoft and Google.

Instead Tim focussed on the new Apple Tech and if you're looking for some Apples:

- The new 15 inch Macbook Air is a slim and lightweight beast packed with features and promised 18 hours of battery life.
- The Mac studio and Mac Pro range are getting a new chip called the M2 Ultra (50% faster than M1) and moving away from Intel completely.
- iOS17 is promising a bunch of new features including Contact Posters, voicemail live transcriptions, and FaceTime video messaging if nobody's home.
- Some tweaks for autocorrect (no more auto "duck") and a better search that looks deep into phone apps including conversation content.
- iPadOS also gets some love including widgets on the lock screen (with live data), you can plug in external cameras, there's better PDF editing options and the Health App is now available.

But most excitingly Apple has announced the Vision Pro VR headset slated to land early next year... calling it a "Spatial Computer", it will have the ability to run iOS apps in an Augmented Reality environment allowing control by keyboard, hand gestures and voice... allowing you to literally work and play at the same time. The cost is ridiculous though, even by Apple's standards at $3.5K US.

STINGER	NEWS 2 - OpenTable scam warning

Have you used one of the online table ordering systems at the pub?

Well, online restaurant-reservation service company OpenTable has warned diners and the hospitality industry of a new scam that has been targeting them. With the current pandemic situation still around, many people are opting for contact-free options, and scammers have taken advantage of this by creating an imposter app that looks like OpenTable. OpenTable has said that diners need to be cautious when receiving calls from restaurants asking for credit card details. These scammers often pretend to be requesting or refunding a deposit, but in reality, they are looking to steal credit card information.

In a situation like this, it is important to ask questions and exercise caution before sharing any information. If you are unsure whether the credit card details are needed, consider hanging up and calling the restaurant back directly to confirm their identity and whether this information is required.

OpenTable has reminded diners that they should never share any personal or financial information unless they are certain of the recipient's identity. They also recommend that diners keep an eye out for any suspicious activity on their credit card statements and report any unauthorised transactions immediately.

STINGER	NEWS 3 - TikTok update

TikTok has been in the news a lot recently, with potential bans looming in the US and a ban already in place on government-issued devices in Australia. However, despite all the controversy, TikTok has just released its active user numbers for the Australian market for the first time. According to the social media company's Australian office, a whopping 8.5 million Australian users are active on the platform every single month. That's a huge number of people, and it shows just how popular TikTok has become in Australia.

Among those 8.5 million users are 350,000 businesses that use TikTok as a marketing tool to reach new and existing audiences. This is a testament to the effectiveness of the platform as a marketing tool, and it's no surprise that so many businesses are jumping on board.

Of course, the recent ban on the TikTok app being used on government-issued devices here in Australia has raised some concerns about the platform's future. However, with basically 30% of the Australian population on TikTok, it seems impossible to imagine a ban any stricter than the one in place today for government devices... After all, no politician would want to risk putting 8.5 million Australians off-side.

It's clear that TikTok has become a huge part of Australian culture, and its popularity shows no signs of slowing down anytime soon.

While TikTok's 8.5 million users in Australia is an impressive number, it's still well short of the massive scale of Facebook which sits somewhere between 15 and 20 million users in Oz with around 2.85 Billion worldwide.

4	12:31	Something for Nothing - Workout at home

Youtube is a great place for entertainment, knowledge and other things but you can also use it to help with fitness and exercise especially as the weather worsens over the winter months.

Consider what you need and what will work best for you and your individual circumstances.

For example: choose between stretching, yoga, low or high intensity cardio or even target certain parts of your body for whatever you wish to achieve... taking into account back pain, knee pain and other things that you may need to consider.

Some great resources include: Yoga with Adriene with over 11 million subscribers check out 5 Minute Full Body Stretch | Total Body Yoga

5	12:47	TECH HISTORY - WHAT HAPPENED THIS WEEK

1976: VHS (Video Home System) video recorders were introduced in the USA based on a standard developed by JVC... competing with and eventually killing off the Sony Betamax format in 1987.

1983: The science fiction film WarGames is released. Notable for bringing the hacking phenomena to the attention of the American public. The film's NORAD set was the most expensive ever built at the time at a cost of $1 million dollars. Not widely known is that the movie studio provided the film's star, Matthew Broderick, with the arcade games Galaga and Galaxian so he could get first-hand experience before shooting the film's arcade scenes.

1984: Tetris was born in Russia and has since become one of the biggest games of all-time.

2005: Apple announces they will be using Intel processors in Mac computers and this week they say that's it for Intel processors. I guess 18 years is long enough.

5b	MUSIC HISTORY - WHAT HAPPENED THIS WEEK
-----------	--

1978: Grease stars John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John scored a No.1 hit on the Billboard Hot 100 with "You're the One that I Want,"

1989: Jason Donovan became the first Australian actor to debut at the top of the UK pop chart with "Sealed with a Kiss."

2004: The amazing singer songwriter - Ray Charles died at the age of 73.

2016: Rod Stewart was knighted in the Queen's Birthday Honours list for services to music and charity.

AND...If it's your birthday today, you share it with singer and actress - Judy Garland who of course is best known as Dorothy from The Wizard of Oz in 1939, where she sang Over the Rainbow. The song was voted "Song of the Century" in a 2001 poll published in America... don't believe me? Google it 😊

Many people claim that technology doesn't make you lazy but rather just helps you do things more efficiently. Although it may seem like social media, entertainment systems, and delivery apps are increasing our laziness, it also shows that we have made technological advancements.

7	13:08	FUTURE TECH from the Innovation Hub - Brain Implants

We've previously talked about Brain Reading which looked at external head mounted EEG caps and using it to control robotic arms with brain signals alone, well...

The world of science and technology is constantly evolving, and this exciting development now means we can actually connect people's brains to computers. Elon Musk's Neuralink has been making headlines for its ambitious plans to create a brain-computer interface (BCI), but it turns out they're not the only ones making progress in this area.

Just weeks ago, surgeons at West Virginia University worked with a New York-based startup called Precision Neuroscience to place thin strips of a cellophane-like material on the brains of three patients. These thumbnail-sized strips are designed to conform to the surface of the brain without damaging its delicate tissue.

During the 15 minutes that the devices were in place, they were able to read, record, and map electrical activity in part of the patients' temporal lobes, which helps process sensory input. The patients were already in the hospital to have brain tumours removed, and doctors used Precision's devices alongside standard electrodes.

While this was just a small pilot study, it is an important step towards building a brain-computer interface that could revolutionise the way we interact with technology. BCIs have the potential to help people with a variety of conditions, such as paralysis or ALS, to communicate and control devices using their thoughts.

Incidentally, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, is a rare neurological disease that affects motor neurons—being those nerve cells in the brain and spinal cord that control voluntary muscle movement like chewing, walking, and talking.

10	13:33	LISTENER QUESTION (Peter in Cannington)

How do I stop my phone screen going dark?

1. If you mean the phone going completely back after a certain time then adjust the Screen Timeout.
 Settings -> Display -> Screen Timeout
2. If you mean brightness level changing automatically then turn off adaptive brightness
 Settings -> Display -> Adaptive brightness

You can also set manual brightness which won't change if Adaptive Brightness is off.

Adaptive brightness does learn though (as you tweak it) so don't be too hasty to turn it off.

You really should be using a password manager these days and with recent problems with some apps, you might be hesitant to trust them. Soon enough PASSKEYS should take over but it will take time for everyone to get on board with the new tech. In the interim Bitwarden is a great choice.	As far as password managers go, Bitwarden checks all the right boxes. For instance, it supports two-factor authentication and secure password sharing. Bitwarden also implements a password generator and can help you import passwords from other services. Best of all, it's free and open-source. On the tin          “Our secure cloud syncing features allow you and your team to access vault data from anywhere, on any device. With end-to-end encryption, all sensitive data is encrypted before it ever leaves your device, keeping your data secure when managing and sharing passwords.”

12	13:46	GAME OF THE WEEK - Grabby Word

Cute little word game by PlayZot.
It's a bit of a mix between scrabble and othello.

You take turns with an opponent (computer or human) laying tiles on the board to make up words.

When it's your opponent's turn, they can try to steal tiles (points) from your words by putting letters at both ends of your words (or part of words). The tiles change colour and they get those points while you lose those points. There are wild card tiles to use when you need and the game is over when someone uses up all their tiles.

There's a tutorial in the game!
