1	12:05	TIPS & TRICKS - RECAP
Last Time	Take a Photo and send it to a friend or loved one

Android

- Open your camera and take a photo.
- If you've just done that, tap on the photo's thumbnail in the camera app to open the photo. If you're wanting to share a previously captured photo, open the photo app to find it and open it up.
- Across the bottom you will see some icons Share - Edit - Delete and maybe others
- Tap on share (symbol) and select the sharing method you would like to use. Android will default to Google Photos but you can look further down for apps including Messages, Messenger (Chats), WhatsApp (if you have it), More for other things like email, print, etc...

Apple

- Similarly selecting the photo to share, you tap the share icon (square with arrow).
- At the top you can choose to send location or not.
- Scroll through apps to select the desired option then go.

3	12:23	NEWS 1 - Another day another scam
---	-------	-----------------------------------

Another day, another scam warning from the Australian Communications and Media Authority (ACMA). The regulator has issued a warning to all Australians to be wary of calls, emails, or SMS claiming to be from an Australian government agency that asks you to urgently update personal information, claim a refund, or make a payment. According to the ACMA, these types of calls, emails, or SMS could be a scam and should be treated with caution. The ACMA has revealed that scammers are using government logos and genuine contact details to trick people into believing they are real. The scammers are impersonating well-known government agencies such as MyGov, the Australian Tax Office (ATO), the Department of Home Affairs, or the ACMA (themselves), making it difficult for people to spot the fake calls, emails, or SMS.

The ACMA has advised Australians to stay vigilant and not to click on any links or provide any personal information unless you are sure the request is genuine. The ACMA has also urged Australians to report any suspicious calls, emails, or SMS to the relevant government agency or the Australian Cyber Security Centre (ACSC).

STINGER	NEWS 2 - No more cheques please

The Australian government has recently announced its decision to phase out cheques, a move that may not mean much to most people, but represents a significant step for the payments industry. This decision is in line with the Strategic Plan for Australia's Payments System, which is a roadmap for developing the sector to ensure a modern, world-class, and efficient payments system that is safe, trusted, and accessible. According to Treasurer Jim Chalmers, the government's vision is to create a payments system that will enable greater competition, innovation, and productivity. The move to phase out cheques is just one of the many steps towards achieving this goal.

The use of cheques has been on the decline for many years now, and this move by the Australian government is a reflection of this. More and more people are turning to digital payment methods, such as credit cards, debit cards, and online payment platforms. With the advent of the New Payments Platform (NPP), which includes PayID and Osco, the government aims to enable instant payments that are secure, reliable, and accessible to everyone.

STINGER	NEWS 3 - Amazon to offer Free movies

Last month, Amazon Prime announced it was increasing its subscription price from $6.99 per month to $9.99 per month. This news was met with mixed reactions from consumers, with many questioning whether the service was worth the extra cost. However, it seems that Amazon has another trick up its sleeve, which could make the price increase more palatable for customers. According to a report from the Wall Street Journal, Amazon is planning to launch an advertising-supported tier of its Prime Video streaming service. This move is part of the company's strategy to generate more revenue from entertainment and build its ad business. The new ad-supported tier of Prime Video will reportedly be free for users, but will include ads that will be shown before and during the content.

This announcement is sure to ruffle some feathers in the streaming industry, particularly among Amazon's biggest competitor, Netflix. Netflix has made a name for itself by offering ad-free streaming, and it's unclear how Amazon's move to introduce ads will affect its user base. But for Amazon, it's a smart business move that could prove to be very lucrative.

6	12:52	DISCUSSIONS - Do you have a Wii ?

<https://www.cnet.com/culture/its-2022-so-im-absolutely-still-playing-my-nintendo-wii/>

In April, Nintendo released Switch Sports, a direct sequel to the legendary Wii Sports, a pack-in game for one of Nintendo's most successful consoles, the Nintendo Wii. That's great news for most people, but I barely noticed. Because despite the fact we're very clearly living in 2022, I'm still playing my Nintendo Wii. And it turns out I'm not alone.

SONG	The Logical Song - Supertramp 1979 8s <ul style="list-style-type: none"> John Helliwell – alto saxophone, siren whistle, backing vocal, intro breathing "'The Logical Song' was born from my questions about what really matters in life. Throughout childhood we are taught all these ways to be and yet we are rarely told anything about our true self. We are taught how to function outwardly, but not guided to who we are inwardly. We go from the innocence and wonder of childhood to the confusion of adolescence that often ends in the cynicism and disillusionment of adulthood. In 'The Logical Song', the burning question that came down to its rawest place was 'please tell me who I am', and that's basically what the song is about. I think this eternal question continues to hit such a deep chord in people around the world and why it stays so meaningful."

Going to the bathroom is a regular part of our daily routine, and we often take it for granted. But what if I told you that your bathroom habits could actually help you detect various diseases and forms of cancer? Yes, you heard right.

Scientists at Stanford University have created a smart toilet that can analyse faeces and urine to detect health issues. The experimental toilet is equipped with advanced technology that can identify users through their fingerprints and even their anal prints. The researchers tested the smart toilet on 21 participants over several months and published their findings in a new study in the Nature Biomedical Engineering science journal on Monday.

So, how does this smart toilet work? Well, it's pretty simple. You just do your business as you normally would, and the toilet does the rest. The sensors in the toilet analyse your faeces and urine for any signs of disease or cancer. This information is then sent to a secure database where researchers can analyse it and provide early detection and intervention.

What's more, the smart toilet is incredibly easy to use. You don't have to change anything about your bathroom routine, and you don't need to collect any samples or take any tests. It's all done automatically and seamlessly.

The potential benefits of this technology are enormous. Early detection of diseases and cancer can be a game-changer in terms of treatment and outcomes. And, because the smart toilet is so easy to use, it has the potential to reach a wider population, including those who may not have access to regular healthcare.

But, as with any new technology, there are also some concerns. Privacy and security are always a concern when it comes to personal data, and the smart toilet is no exception. However, the researchers at Stanford have taken great care to ensure that the data collected is secure and anonymous.

SONG	Gerry Rafferty - Baker St 1978 22s Ravenscroft, a session musician, was in the studio to record a brief soprano saxophone part, and suggested that he use instead the alto saxophone he had in his car.[10] The distinctive wailing, bluesy sound of the sax riff on 'Baker Street' was a result of the tuning of the alto being slightly flat, and Ravenscroft later considered this to have been a mistake. He said, in an interview in 2011, that listening to 'Baker Street' irritated him because he was out of tune. The saxophone part led to what became known as "the 'Baker Street' phenomenon", a resurgence in the sales of saxophones and their use in mainstream pop music and television advertising.

Are you someone who loves to add some flair to their home appliances? Do you love to experiment with different colours and moods to create a personalised space? If you answered yes to any of these questions, then you might want to check out LG's latest innovation – the MoodUp fridge. This South Korean electronics giant has done it again – pushing the boundaries of what we expect from our everyday appliances. The LG MoodUp fridge is an incredible addition to any kitchen, with its LED light panels on the front that can illuminate in over a dozen different colours. That's right – over a dozen colours! The upper panel has 22 colour options, while the lower panel has 19 colour options, giving you plenty of choices to match your mood.

But wait, there's more! The MoodUp fridge also has a built-in Bluetooth speaker. This means that you can connect your smartphone or any other Bluetooth-enabled device and play your favourite tunes while you cook or entertain guests. Imagine having friends over for dinner and being able to set the mood with your favourite music and lighting – it's the ultimate party trick!

The best part about the LG MoodUp fridge is that you can control the light panels through LG's app. With a series of preset colour schemes to match different seasons and moods, you can easily switch between colours to suit your mood. Feeling blue? Choose a calming blue hue to create a peaceful atmosphere. Want to crank up the energy levels? Switch to a bright red to get everyone pumped up.

Who Can It Be Now - Men At Work 16s 1981

The song opens with a saxophone hook by Greg Ham; Hay had originally written the saxophone section later in the song, but Mclan suggested moving the hook to the introduction. While recording the song, Mclan wanted a saxophone solo and told Ham to play anything just to get the sound. Mclan used Ham's improvised composition as the solo in the song.

Do I need to pay for Virus Protection for Windows?

I would say it depends on how secure you want to be and what version of Windows you have installed. Windows 10+ Microsoft Defender is not too shabby but does not provide some of the premium features you pay for with the virus protection specialists. Most notably is Internet Browser protection for Banking, WiFi intrusion protection, advanced firewall options and malware detection. You can fill the gaps with other free products though. e.g. Malwarebytes.

You can get good value multiple user licences if you're happy to shell out some coin.

SONG	Careless Whisper - George Michael 1984 0s After the backing track and George's vocal had been recorded, Wexler had booked the top saxophone player from Los Angeles to fly in and do the solo.[18] "He arrived at eleven and should have been gone by twelve", recalled Wham! manager Simon Napier-Bell. "Instead, after two hours, he was still there while everyone in the studio shuddered with embarrassment. He just couldn't play the opening riff the way George wanted it, the way it had been on the demo. But that had been made two years earlier by a friend of George's who lived round the corner and played sax for fun in the pub."

SONG	I Want A New Drug - Huey Lewis & The News 1984 16s According to Lewis, the song is a love song, and the meaning of the word "drug" in the song was purposely open ended. "It's really a love song. It's not a pro-drug song; it's not really even an anti-drug song. The word drug sort of gets your attention. But I think in love relationships there's more than 'I want you' or 'I need you' kind of thing." Lewis believed the definition of love was very open to interpretation depending on the listener. "I think real love contains humour and anger and confusion, all of those things."

12	13:46	GAME OF THE WEEK - Cut the Rope

Available on Apple, Android and Windows
And you can play online at <https://cuttherope.net> and you can install to Google Chrome

Released in 2010 and last updated in 2021 so there have been many versions.

The objective of the game is to feed candy to a little green creature named Om Nom while collecting stars along the way. Over the multiple games you get to meet other member of the Nom family including Nello Nom, Little Nom and later Nibble Nom.

So Nom arrives at your front door inside a cardboard box with instructions to feed him. Inside the box are food treats tethers by bits of string. You need to cut them in such a way as to collect stars and ultimately place the food in Om Nom's mouth - easy right!...Wrong. Give it a go and see.
